BRIGHT SAYINGS FROM THE SECOND FLOOR REAR

Judge Pickett: "How many inventories must you file when a partner dies?"

Smejkal: "Two."

Judge Pickett: "What are they?"

Smejkal: "Why, the original and the copy."

Anne: "Well, that's almost right, isn't it?"

Hill: "Fee tail special—limiting it to heir males."

Judge Pickett: "At common law, when she died, did a man have to bury his wife?"

McCarthy: "That's about all he could do."

Judge Pickett: "What contracts were unassignable at common law?"

Bailey: "Marriage contracts."

Hugh Bailey, last week in reviewing the U. S. Constitution in preparation for the coming Constitutional Law final, discovered the "Freedom of Press" clause and immediately concluded that he's going to sue the government for all his past-pressing bills. Bring on the "wishie water." (How about liability for suits he's pressed in person?—Ed.)

DER DENTIST

Der Spring iss gekommen
My tooth der ruft aus:
"Ach Gott in dem Himmel,
"Please get me pulled out!"

I go by der dentist,
Der Kerl gives a look—
"Hm -m -m dat iss different.
"I'll put in the book:

"A date for tomorrow at 9 A.M."
And then he gives me the air again.

I go in the morning at 9 o'clock sharp
To the dentist office—not on a lark.

I sit und wait und read and groan;
At 11 o'clock it rings his 'phone:

"Hello!"
"Yes, doctor."
"Yes, the dutchman iss here."
"All right, doctor, I'll tell him."

The nurse she comes over and und tells to me:

"The doctor can't be here till half past three."

Ach gott in dem Himmel!
Vat iss hiss game?
Hol' der Teufel den dentist
Und give him my pain!
